Mr. Vallandigham's Speech-Bluck Republican Attempt to

Choke Him Off andits Patture On Wednesday evening, Mr. Vallandigham claimed the floor in the House of Representatives, and after a few remarks gave way to a motion to adjourn. The motion was negatived by 105 navs to 104 year. Mr. Vallandigham then asked for an adjournment, as he did not wish to proceed until morning. A second mostion to adjourn was lost by two majority. Mr. Vallandigham then proceeded to read from the Vallandigham then proceeded to read from the Vallandigham then proceeded to read from the No Eamily should be without a lost of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers. Vallaudigham then proceeded to read from the compendium of Helper's villainous book, extracts embracing the strongest abolition sentisments, which sixty eight Republican members of the House had endorsed, but sgain asked the courtesy of an adjournment, which was again refused by the Black Republicans. But at half past five, Vallandigham's unconqueraable determination prevailed, and the House adjourned.

Yesterday morning, Mr. Vallandigham, having the floor, remarked that the couriesy he extended to others at all times, he was resolved to exact for himself at all hazards, and therefore last evening he had the right to expect the cour toxy of an adjournment as he did not then wish to address the House. He then repeated his declaration of the evening before "that the man who endorsed Helper's book, containing insurrectionary sentiments and intended to sow the sends of discord and strife and civil war, was not fit to be Speaker, or a member of the House," He said that he occupied a position of neutrality; that he had no sympathy and very little good feeling for the north; he was bound to it by no ties whatever, except the strongest of all ties, a common language, a common country. His principles were United States principles. He was not a pro slavery or a nonpro-slavery man, but had a screne indifference on the subject. He thought he occupied the on the subject. He thought he occupied the LINEN GOODS constitutional ground of our fathers, &c. He LINEN avowed bimself a western man by birth, senti ment and education, while at the same time he arowed himself a Constitutional man, He thought the western people had lest themselves too long to the north, and inculested a

Mr. Vallandigham took administration ground in regard to slavery in the territories, in accordance with the opinion he has always avowed. He declared himself against disunione Constitution and one destiny, which could not be fulfilled except as an united people by the immediate, total and unconditions; estruction of the sectional party.

It is quite evident that the Black Republicans tried to get Mr. Vallandigham "ander," and that the attempt most signally failed. His in: Van Ausdal, Dixon & Co. domitable pluck was too much for them. They served a notice upon him, that they would not hear him further, but he placed them at defiance. We serve a notice upon them, that when they succeed in any way in "getting down" or causing the Democratic Representative of the Ohio Third Congressional District, to "back down" from either his duties or his rights, they will have achieved a task, an ability for which we do not in the least suspect them of possessing.
